

Name the problem type

Identify the six problem types data analysts typically face.

Problem types in data analysis

Flashcard exercise

Can you name the problem type?

1. Description

Using data to make informed decisions about how things may be in the future.

Problem type

Making predictions

2. Description

Grouping data based on common features.

Problem type

Categorizing things

3. Description

Identifying data that is different from the norm.

Problem type

Spotting something unusual

4. Description

Recognizing broader concepts and trends from categorized data.

Problem type

Identifying themes

5. Description

Identifying similar challenges across different entities—and using data and insights to find common solutions.

Problem type

Discovering connections

6. Description

Using historical data about what happened in the past to understand how likely it is to happen again.

Problem type

Finding patterns

You're done!

As a data analyst, you will need to identify the type of problem you're facing before you can solve it.

