

Test your knowledge on solving problems with data

1. Which problem type involves assigning information to different groups or clusters based on common features?

1 / 1 point

- ☒ Categorizing things
- ☐ Making predictions
- ☐ Identifying themes
- ☐ Finding patterns

✓ Correct

Categorizing things involves assigning information to different groups or clusters based on common features.

2. A data professional at a snack foods company wants to identify themes related to customer buying patterns and product popularity. How should they proceed?

1 / 1 point

- ☒ Group categorized information into broader concepts
- ☐ Use data to make an informed decision about how things may be in the future
- ☐ Identify data that is different from the norm
- ☐ Assign information to different groups or clusters based on common features

✓ Correct

To identify themes, the data professional should group categorized information into broader concepts.

3. Fill in the blank: In the _____ problem type, a data analyst finds similar challenges faced by different entities and combines data and insights to address them.

1 / 1 point

- ☒ discovering connections
- ☐ categorizing things
- ☐ spotting something unusual
- ☐ finding patterns

✓ Correct

In the discovering connections problem type, a data analyst finds similar challenges faced by different entities and combines data and insights to address them.

4. Which problem type involves using historical data to understand what happened in the past and is therefore likely to happen again?

1 / 1 point

- ☒ Finding patterns
- ☐ Making predictions
- ☐ Identifying themes
- ☐ Discovering connections

✓ Correct

Finding patterns involves using historical data to understand what happened in the past and is therefore likely to happen again.