Putting it all together:

elements of an effective narrative

Libby is a data analyst for a home improvement store. As she creates an important upcoming presentation, review scenarios and identify which of the five elements of storytelling correspond to each.

Organize an effective presentation

Review the scenario and identify the element of storytelling by selecting it from the list.

Scenario	Element of data storytelling
The head of marketing asks Libby to analyze the new lumber supply chain data and market research. She will use the data Libby provides to give a presentation to the executive team and board of directors.	Aha moment☐ Characters☒ Big reveal☐

Scenario	Element of data storytelling
Libby finds that supply issues cut inventory across the entire U.S. market last year, but these problems are almost resolved in the supply chain. Demand is stronger than ever, and the company has a big opportunity to run marketing campaigns to highlight the availability and new lower price of lumber before their competitors. Scenario	Element of data storytelling
With lumber prices up 32%, every penny counts, so the home improvement store must determine how to mitigate inefficiencies in its supply chain. The head of marketing also hopes the data will help identify new opportunities to optimize processes.	Characters☐ Big reveal☐ Plot☒

Moving forward, Libby suggests that the company should run a three-day sale on lumber across all U.S. stores within the next two weeks to signal lumber availability. Libby also encourages the team to closely monitor sales and measure the consumer sentiment driving demand to inform other future large- and small-scale marketing campaigns.	Setting ☐
